

BECOME A VOLUNTEER

Join us in caring for the whole community through sharing the tasks of daily living!

The Fellowship Community is a dynamic, work-based, intergenerational eldercare community founded on the ideas of Rudolf Steiner's Anthroposophy.

Approximately 140 elder members, co-workers, and their children live in the 80-acre rural setting of a farm, with woods and orchards, located 30 miles northwest of New York City. It's a place for people who are interested in self-development through working and learning in service to others and caring for the earth.

Since 1966, we have proudly helped hundreds of elderly members enjoy purpose and meaning in the later years of their lives.

Volunteers are an indispensable part of the Fellowship Community experience. Each volunteer brings their own unique experiences and skills to help us thrive.

Our volunteers take a real joy in their service, and cherish the experiences gained in our community setting. Many volunteers make lasting friendships with our members, co-workers, students, and interns, who are also a part of the community.

We have volunteer opportunities for helping directly with our elderly members, at Duryea Farm, in the gardens, and our various workshops: pottery, wood & metal, weavery, candle making, and Mercury Press. Many volunteers are interested in Rudolf Steiner's philosophy, biodynamic agriculture, or simply helping with kitchen cleanup or folding laundry.

We also celebrate many festivals where volunteers help with everything from serving food, parking, or accompanying elder members to an event; and for those volunteers who like to sing, dance, or play music, our festivals are a wonderful opportunity to showcase their talents.

We rely greatly on the generosity and dedication of our many volunteers, as we could not function without their help

More than 25,000 hours are contributed by hundreds of volunteers each year here at the Fellowship

A significant number of our volunteers are retired from their professions, and many become members

If you are interested in volunteering with us, we would love to hear from you!
